How will I represent the 6th Plymouth District?

I will be a full-time representative with no outside jobs or interest to interfere with my giving the 6th Plymouth District the representation it deserves. It also means that I will represent the whole district and not just one group or town in the district.

I have promised to set up regular meetings in each of the district's seven towns. At these meetings, you the people can keep me better informed of your opinions and wishes. At the same time, I will meet with any individual, group and town officials in order to keep them better informed of current legislation.

As your representative, I will meet my obligation to you by attending and voting on the many issues which come before the legislature. During the last few years, the State Legislature has acted annually on over 6,000 bills. Frequently, the 240 member House has passed or defeated bills with less than 20% of the membership present and voting. Let's not be among those districts which are not represented.

Would you believe Waikiki? The surfers got the word on Sunday that the hurricane bred waves were reaching the Mattapoisett beach and they turned out in force to catch a few rides. Soon, most of the town came down to see the sport, so rare in this section. The driving rain and strong winds kept most of the spectators inside their cars with the windshield wipers working to clear the view. These conditions didn't seem to bother the "hang ten" crowd as they happily worked the ocean for free rides. It was a most unusual day - an exciting close to the season.

A Farm Boy's Memories of 100 Years Ago

Getting in the ice in winter was only one half of Father's Uncle Ed's ice business. The other half took place in the summer months when early each morning one of Mr. Hammond's hired men loaded the ice cart at the ice house, drove the mile to the village and turning down Main Street, trailed by a line of children, stopped at every house to deliver ice. Even those of my generation can remember the excitement of watching for Mahoney's ice cart on hot, golden summer mornings. Finally the green wagon with the white roof wheeled round the corner at the head of the street, followed by a group of bare-footed kids who begged at every stop for ice chips to suck.

The cart stopped at the house, Mr. Secia and his helper climbed down, and with their tongs dragged a huge slab of ice from the frigid interior to the tailgate. Here Mr. Secia whipped his ice pick out of his hop pocket and chipped off a hunk. It was a matter of wonder how the ice suddenly broke in a straight line from just a few sharp, chip-scattering strokes. Then he picked the piece up with his tongs, hung it by one handle on a pair of scales--35 lbs., 50 lbs., 75 lbs.,--brushed it off with a black whisk broom, and carried it into the yard and in the back door.

How did he know how big a piece to cut? Mr. Secia knew the size, shape, and capacity of the ice compartment of the ice chest in every house in town. He also knew how fast the ice melted in every ice chest. He took out the old piece, lifted in the new one, broke up the old one with his ice pick and packed the pieces around the new one. As he returned to the ice cart and climbed into the driver's seat, the children scraped up the last of the chips he had made and sucked them happily. Did anything ever taste so good?

But to get back to Father and the Herring Weir. By far the busiest and most exciting days occurred each spring when the herring came. Then the corner was alive with teams, wagons, carriages, with horses, oxen and men, stretching for a quarter of a mile in every direction. Up the river from the harbor the herring swarmed, millions of them, filling the water in a packed mass of writhing fish until, especially at low tide, a boy could have walked across the river on their backs if he could have kept his footing. And how good those first fresh herring tasted each spring!

From the earliest settlement of the three villages of Rochester every family in town had been entitled to a share of the herrings. In 1700 this number was 5000 per family, but as the population of the villages increased, the number of herring per citizen was gradually reduced, until by Father's time, 175 years later, each citizen of the three towns was entitled to 400.

For a century and a half smoked or salted herring formed an essential part of the diet of most of the people for months each year. But after the Civil War, as the standard of living rose, many people wanted only a few herring each season. Yet Father remembered many a farm family who ate nothing for breakfast every morning all winter long but salt herring and brown bread.

At any rate, herring days were exciting days for boys at the Herring Weir; the men in the spray down on the landing stages, the huge swarms of fish in the swirling water at the foot of the weir, the great netfuls of squirming fish flung through the air back onto the platforms, the men scooping them up and counting them out to waiting citizens or packing them in barrels to be sold to New Bedford.

In the eighties, after Father had grown up and gone away to work, Walter Bowman, Sr. and his brother Frank hit upon a scheme to make money from the excess herrings. They packed two or three barrels and sent them by Capt. Walter Perry of Marion in his catboat to Vineyard Haven where the fleet of fishing schooners were stocking up for their annual voyage to the Grand Banks. Capt. Perry parcelled out the herring among the schooners, asking the captains to try them for bait.

When the fleet returned, the captains were enthusiastic about the success of the herring. The next year the Bowman brothers went to every man in town and asked if they could have the remainder of the 400 herrings that each man didn't want. Since this came to 350 or 375 per person, the brothers soon had rights to thousands. Next year they barrelled 1,000's upon 1,000's of herring and teamed them to Long Wharf. That year and for several following, ten or fifteen of the tall-masted, graceful schooners sailed into the harbor, tied up at the wharf, and loaded hundreds of barrels of Mattapoisett herrings to be used on the Banks for bait.

AIR FORCE NEEDS PRIOR SERVICEMEN

TSGT B. J. Conboy, local Air Force Recruiting Officer, announced a sweeping change in Air Force enlistment standards for prior servicemen.

Until further notice ex-servicemen from any branch of the armed forces who have been out of the service for as much as two years can enter the United States Air Force at the same rank that they held upon discharge; for those that have been out longer a reduction of grade may be necessary.

At the present time almost any skill from clerks to cooks, radar to radiology, and mechanics to medics are urgently needed. If you have given thought to returning to the service, this may cal Society is off to a good start, according to Charles Mendell, chairman of the drive committee. Donations are coming in promptly, and a substantial anonymous gift has helped raise the total.

This is encouraging, for the $4000.00 goal previously announced is but the minimum and every possible contribution is needed to construct a building the town can be proud of. During the fall and winter the Society is planning several money raising activities to aid the cause.

COFFEE HOUSE DEVELOPS
STUDENT LEADERSHIP

The central theme of the recent meeting of the SMTI Coffee House Planning Group was the need to develop and encourage student leadership. The Planning Group met at the Westport Friends Community House on Main Road, Central Village, Westport on Tuesday evening, August 30th. The gathering of more than 50 persons consisted of students, faculty, Friends of SMTI, alumni and community and labor leaders. The meeting was presided over by Edwin Hinshaw, former Pastor of the Westport Friends Meeting and now Secretary for Youth Activities of New England Yearly Meeting of Friends.

The theme of developing student leadership was discussed by Daniel Gomes, sophomore student in psychology, Professor Aris Papas of the Psychology Department; Dr. Theodore Denton, Psychiatrist; and Mr. Heckman, Education Director of the International Ladies Garment Workers of Fall River and New Bedford.

Daniel Gomes presented the program for September and October. The opening coffee house session at Westport on Friday, September 16th, will feature a discussion led by Professor Walter Cass of the SMTI English Department. The topic will be "You and the Future of the SMTI". The discussion will be carried forward at the second coffee meeting on Sunday afternoon, September 18th, at Westport, when Mrs. Philip Fortin, president of the Friends of SMTI will lead.

Tom Leondardo, president of the Student Council, is arranging a meeting where he and Don Solomon will explain the proposed student government constitution to Coffee House participants.

Daniel Gomes indicated that other events will feature a debate on "Censorship" by Professor Philip Lozinski of the Art Department and Professor Robert McCabe of the Mathematics Department. The debate will be presided over by Edward Petrilak, art student and editor of the Talker, an SMTI student newspaper. The debate will continue a discussion initiated last Spring in the Talker office on the Fall River campus.

Other events will include a jazz duo, folk singing, a panel discussion on American foreign policy in Viet Nam, and drama readings.

Students last year took an active part in folk singing and jazz concerts, and Professor William P. Nicolet of the English Department coached the play readings.

The planning meeting at Westport definitely agreed that discussion leaders should limit their formal presentations to ten or fifteen minutes, and that discussion leaders would be encouraged to participate in an informal exchange of views with students, tablehopping, during the four-hour coffee house sessions. The emphasis would be on student involvement, and a strong effort would be made to avoid a classroom atmosphere. For this reason, the coffee house sessions will be held off-campus at the Westport Center.

At a later time, when funds permit, the Coffee House Group hopes to rent or purchase a site within walking distance of the new SMTI campus in North Dartmouth.

The meeting was given copies of a new illustrated brochure describing the objectives of the Coffee House, and showing pictures of informal discussion groups.

The Planning Group appointed a Publicity Com-
